The polar Bear has adapted to the frigid arctic environment. To begin with, the polar bear has to cope with the coldness. To do that, the polar bear has thick hollow fur to keep warm. The hollow guard hairs keep the polar bear warm by taking the sun light to the skin. Also a polar bear will kill a seal and eat the seal's blubber first. This is because it gives energy to the polar bear. In conclusion, the polar bear adapted to the frigid arctic environment in these ways.
